

NEPC returns to Fenway Park for May meeting

Glassboro, NJ-based Sunny Valley International, a leading shipper of eastern peaches from New Jersey and South Carolina as well as blueberries from New Jersey, sponsored the most recent meeting of the New England Produce Council, held May 13 at the historic Fenway Park in Boston. The meeting drew 136 people from the trade, including a heavy buyer presence from retailers such as Hannaford Bros., Stop & Shop, Market Basket, Big Y and Roche Bros.

Greg Caveng, Bob Von Rohr and Jim Gatter of Sunny Valley International, sponsor of the New England Produce Council meeting May 13 at Fenway Park in Boston.

Enjoying the environs of Fenway Park during the May 13 meeting of the New England Produce Council were Kevin Donovan of Phillips Mushroom Farms, Nate Sprague of Hannaford Bros., Cece Krumrine of the council and Will Wedge of Hannaford Bros.

Jack Salamon of Shaw's Supermarkets and president of the New England Produce Council with Laura Sullivan, executive director of the council.

Attending the May 13 NEPC meeting at Fenway Park in Boston on behalf of Shaw's Supermarkets were Gail Walker, Lou Andronica, NEPC President Jack Salamon and Orazio Finocchiaro.

Peter Goulet of Pinnacle Sales, Dave Patnaude of Coast to Coast Co., Peter Wildes of Hannaford Bros. and Brian Goulet of Pinnacle Sales.

Bill Gordon and Dan Carroll of Roche Bros.

John McCann of Del Monte and Ernie Marsicio of Turbana Corp,

Jim Gatter of Sunny Valley International, which sponsored the May 13 NEPC meeting, with Mike Giza of Big Y and Will Wedge of Hannaford Bros.