David Tonso of Canon Potato Co., who was at the PMA foodservice exposition representing the Colorado Potato Administrative Committee, said that this year's potato crop from the state's San Luis Valley was looking to be similar to last year — tight on volume but high in quality.

At the Spice World booth during the PMA foodservice exposition were Mitch DiMarco and Louis Hymel, who were promoting the company's line of foodservice products. Said Mr. Hymel, 'It is a good show with a lot of high-quality people' on the floor.

Jeff Hyosaka and Melinda Richardson of Pacific International Marketing displayed PIM's main lines during the PMA foodservice exposition. Ms. Richardson said that the firm was pleased with the volume of traffic on the floor as well as the number of foodservice operators in attendance.

PMA President Bryan Silbermann and his wife, Bonnie, stopped at the Colorful Harvest booth to visit with Robbie Coyle, John Chubbuck and Doug Ranno.

At the Gourmet Trading booth, Patrick Ramirez, Jan McDaniels, Julia Inestroza, Kristen Francisco and Brian Miller were seeing strong interest by foodservice operators in the firm's white and green asparagus products.

First-time exhibitor Frontera Produce provided samples of its products to PMA foodservice exposition attendees. Present at the company's booth were Ken Nabal, Mike Geisler, Michelle Gonzales, Will Steele and Amy Gates.
