

PMA FRESH SUMMIT 2009

Christopher Nelson, Jerry Butt, Kristen Reid and Leonard Batti of The Mixtec Group.

Tom Papke, vice president of merchandising and business development for Yakima Fresh, handed out health and nutritional information to conventioners at the PMA Fresh Summit.

Pal Brooks, Bill Brindle and Jose Rossignoli promoted Brooks Tropicals' papayas and other tropical fruits during the PMA Fresh Summit in Anaheim, CA.

Tony Smith Sr. and Lou Thurston of Staples Print Solutions with the firm's full body shrink sleeves. The firm, formerly known as Corporate Express Document & Print Management, was recently purchased by the office supply giant Staples Inc. and has been serving the produce industry for over 30 years. The firm offers information systems, product identification labels, flexible packaging, RFID and traceability solutions for the Produce Traceability Initiative.

Mishalin Modena and Woody Johnson of Growers Express/Green Giant Fresh.

Beach Street Farms was displaying strawberries in one-pound, two-pound and four-pound clamshells as well as long-stemmed berries at its PMA booth. Shown from the company were Paul Foster, Stephanie Hilton, Joe Urabe and Steve Rodoni.

Sheldon Rockey, Jill Overdorf and Mark Pittenger of the Specialty Potato Alliance promoted the newly formed organization's fingerling potato offerings, including its second proprietary variety, which has yet to be named.