Vineland Produce Auction opens 95th season with strong demand

By

Keith Loria

June 1, 2026

The Vineland Cooperative Produce Auction is off to a strong start in 2026, beginning its 95th season with steady demand, expanded product offerings and growers continuing to adapt to changing market conditions.

“This year’s auction began two weeks earlier,” said Carol DeFoor, office manager for the entity. “The start date is always largely dependent on the weather.”

The season opened with a broad assortment of spring vegetables and greens.

Viking Roses at IFTEX 2026

June 1, 2026

In 1995, John Williams started Harvest Limited in Athi River, Kenya, pioneering spray roses and introducing them to the European market.

It has taken some decades, but today, more and more spray varieties survive the first few days in the vase, and all rose breeders have sprays in their breeding programs. The spray rose is following in the footsteps of the spray carnation, with hundreds of hectares of production, increasing daily.
